Innovation, Value, Payer Awareness Key to Igniting Specialty Rx Change

January headlines (see "Explore" below) attest to the fact that the need to rein in prescription drugs costs has never been more urgent, which was the area of focus at The Action Group's January 16, 2019, Community Dialogue. The title, "Driving Transformative Change in the Specialty Drug Marketplace Through Health Policy and Legislative Action," informed the discussion featuring local and national thought leaders. (View all of the presentations here.)

"Although we've wrapped up over four years of study on the specialty drug marketplace, the real work to elicit change on health policy and legislative issues is just beginning," says Carolyn Pare, Action Group president and CEO. "It's not just about knowing what to do, it's about innovating, demanding value, and raising payer awareness so expectations are understood...and acted upon. We're all part of the solution."

February Member Meeting: Health Care Fraud, Waste and Abuse

Financial losses due to health care fraud are in the tens of billions of dollars each year, according to the National Health Care Anti-Fraud Association (NHCAA). In fact, losses resulting from fraud and abuse are typically estimated to be between 3%-10% of total health care expenditures. This makes it an important topic for employers in terms of cost and fiduciary plan management. Members are invited to attend our February 28, 2019, member meeting, "Eye-Opening Insights: Fraud, Waste and Abuse in Health Care," from 8 a.m.-10 a.m.

We've assembled a panel of industry experts who have made a career of uncovering, analyzing and addressing fraud, waste and abuse in the health care system. Click here for a full meeting description.

Mental Health 2019 Guiding Coalition Update

At our October 30, 2018, Mental Health Community Dialogue, Liz Beckius of Best Buy and Nance Lee Mosquera of The City of St. Paul carried the message on behalf of employers: "Join us in accelerating performance improvement in integrated mental health care."

There has been an excellent response to this call to action, and we have assembled a highly engaged Mental Health Guiding Coalition. This includes employers that were part of the 2017-2018 Mental Health Learning Network, as well as new employers with a shared commitment to accelerating performance improvement in integrated mental health care. There is diversity in public and private employers, of all sizes, and various industries.

Several employers will wear “dual hats,” also representing health plans, care systems, and providers. In addition, our multi-stakeholder group includes representatives of NAMI Minnesota, Minnesota Community Measurement, and the Minnesota Medical Association. We are also honored to have an elite group of key advisors to bring additional insight, connections, and national leverage to our work. These include: Darcy Gruttadaro, Henry Harbin, and Mike Thompson.

The group kicks off on February 15, 2019, and will be meeting throughout the year with a focus on action. The Guiding Coalition will leverage the unique assets of Minnesota, create a “common table” for the exchange of perspectives and ideas, identify and prioritize opportunities for collaborative action, agree upon meaningful measures, and monitor progress toward goals. Please watch for additional updates throughout the year. EDITORIAL

Business community lends its muscle to improve mental health care in Minnesota.

Business leaders' involvement could have 'incredibly positive impact.'

This finding in a new report on Minnesota's health care outcomes is heartbreaking: Just 8 percent of adults who seek medical care for depression — one of the most common mental illnesses — will be in remission at six months.

The situation is even grimmer when looking at past years' findings from the nonprofit Minnesota Community Measurement (MCM) group, which gathers and reports information on health care quality, cost and patient experience to drive state improvement. The 8 percent remission figure hasn't changed in the last three years, according to MCM's latest report, which came out last week. That's shocking in a state that's home to world-class medical providers.

"We are consistently hearing that we are 'further ahead' on mental health, we know we have unique assets in our state, and we sense the appetite for Minnesota to be the leader on 'something big.' By convening a multi-stakeholder Guiding Coalition with the right sense of purpose and urgency, we believe that this potential will be realized."

Health Care Issues on the 2019 Legislative Agenda

Dozens of newly elected officials arrived at the State Capitol this month to officially open the 2019 Legislative session, and Governor Tim Walz and Lt.

Governor Peggy Flanagan have been working diligently to fill out their administration. Their presence, combined with an incoming DFL House majority comprised of 40 percent freshmen, lends an air of freshness to the Capitol.

There are still many familiar faces: Tony Lourey, long-serving State Senator and chair of many Health and Human Services committees, is taking his experience to the Department of Human Services as its new commissioner. At the Department of Health, Jan Malcolm is one of the few Dayton-era commissioners asked to stay on in a leadership role.

There will be no shortage of health care issues being discussed in 2019. The following issues either remain unresolved from the 2018 Legislative session or are a priority for elected officials this year:

- Pharmacy costs and policies to respond to the growing opioid crisis.
- Whether or how to initiate a public buy-in option to the MnCARE insurance program.
- Dealing with funding the reformed high-risk insurance pool for the individual market.
- Investments in mental health for all.
- What to do with the scheduled repeal of the Provider Tax, which funds the state's Health Care Access Fund.

We will update you on issues as they come up throughout the Legislative session. In the meantime, you can find additional information about the Legislature and its activities here.
